Abstract

This collection contains administrative records of the Student Academy of the American Academy of Physician Assistants (SAAAPA) compiled by the organization's administrative assistant between 1972 and 1982. The folders contain minutes of board meetings, reports, governance materials and correspondence. Correspondence from J. Jeffrey Heinrich, the first appointed president of the SAAAPA, to students provides information about the APAP's first attempts to organize student societies which in turn would send representatives to national meetings to address students' issues.

Historical Note

Students have always played an active role in the American Academy of Physician Assistants (AAPA). They were among the first to organize and share information with their peers. The original Board of Directors of the APAP included 16 graduate and 4 student PAs. By 1972, graduates began to outnumber students in the organization and J. Jeffery Heinrich, a Duke University PA student, was appointed the first president of the Student Academy of the American Academy of Physician Assistants. Mr. Heinrich sent each PA program a letter requesting that their students form their own institutional societies and select a national representative to stay in touch with him. The student national representatives were to meet during the annual AAPA meetings, discuss issues and elect one of the representatives to serve on the AAPA's Board of Directors the following year. In 1978, the Student Academy adopted a constitution.

Over time, the Student Academy of the American Academy of Physician Assistants (SAAAPA) has developed its own structure within the AAPA. The Student Academy does not have individual members, as the student members join AAPA; instead SAAAPA's members consist of the registered student society at each accredited PA program. Each PA Program's student society is represented in the Assembly of Representatives (AOR), the SAAAPA's legislative and policymaking body. The students have their own Board of Directors, elect one person each year to serve on the AAPA's Board of Directors and appoint student delegates to represent their interest in the AAPA's House of Delegates (HOD).

Overview

This collection contains information about the formative years of the Student Academy of the American Academy of Physician Assistants (SAAAPA). Materials include minutes of SAAAPA meetings, correspondence, governance documents, handbooks and reports. The minutes contain goals and objectives for the organization, bylaw changes, appointment of students to the AAPA House of Delegates and insight into the organization's history. The handbook was distributed to student societies to help them register their organization with the AAPA and remain in compliance with policies and procedures.

Collection Arrangement

This collection is arranged in chronological order within subject categories. The collection is a subseries of the Society's Archival Collection series, Organization and Institution Records, 1972-2001.
