

Historical Happenings

Newsletter of the Physician Assistant History Society

Message from the President

Stephen D. Wilson, PA-C

Greetings,

By the time you read this newsletter issue, two significant historical events for the PA profession will soon occur. The Society's new book, Physician Assistants as Social Innovators in Healthcare, will have been published and the annual AAPA conference, "AAPA2022", will once again be attended in person. Both events provide a great kickoff to the PA History Society's 20th Anniversary year!

Physician Assistants as Social Innovators in Healthcare was an idea of the Trustees that began to take shape over 3 years ago. It is now the most comprehensive book written about the profession. The project was spearheaded by the capable editorial leadership of Trustee Leslie Kole with support from PA History Society Managing Director Lori Konopka-Sauer. The topics covered by its 20 authors, the significant pictures gathered, and the hundreds of references compiled and organized highlight the impact that the PA profession has had as a social innovation in healthcare. I hope you will stop by our booth at the AAPA conference to purchase your copy. Also, one lucky person will win a book to add to their personal library. Didn't make it to the conference? Check out the details of the book on our website here: <https://pahx.org/pa-history-book/>

We Hope to See You at AAPA!

The PA History Society team is excited to be returning to an in-person AAPA Conference experience this month. We're looking forward to speaking with you at the Society's Booth, which will

While the country begins to emerge from the pandemic, it is certainly welcome news that PAs will once again have the opportunity to meet with their colleagues to gain a significant educational experience, break bread together and renew those lasting friendships at “AAPA2022”. We know that dealing with COVID-19 is not over and that it will be a disease of consideration in our future differential diagnosis. It has been a difficult ordeal for all of us and we look forward to the camaraderie with our peers. As with all healthcare over the last 55 years, PAs have provided a tremendous service to their communities during this pandemic through treatment and promoting responsible preventions. Check out some of their stories on our website here: <https://pahx.org/news/thank-you-for-your-care-during-the-covid-19-fight/>. If you would like to share your own COVID-19 related story, please email us at: contactus@pahx.org.

*Lori Konopka-Sauer, BS
 PAHx Managing Director*

The PA History Society’s latest book, Physician Assistants as Social Innovators in Healthcare, will be available at the PAHx booth during the AAPA conference. This educational resource for PA faculty, students, researchers, and legislators presents the history of the PA profession as a social innovation that has changed and improved the way medical, surgical, and preventive healthcare services are delivered. It explores the transformations that have taken place over the past 55 years to ensure that PA innovation continues to meet societal needs for effective, efficient, and affordable healthcare services. During the AAPA Conference, be sure to stop by the PAHx Booth to check out our newest resource! Why did you decide on a career in medicine?

Social drivers of health play a key role in the lives of our minority and underserved patient populations. I chose a career path in medicine to play a small but important role in working to alleviate these factors.

Josh & Emily Penninger

 Asheville, NC

Where is your favorite place to study?

Quiet spots are my go-to places to study. Most of the time, that's finding an empty room in the Wake Forest School of Medicine or sitting at my desk at home.

Have you thought about what kind of medicine you'd like to practice?

I'm most interested in practicing in a hospital setting. As of now, the two areas I'm looking at are emergency medicine or hospital medicine. However, family medicine has been more on my radar lately, and I'm interested to see how my 2nd year of PA school changes this!

What advice do you wish someone would have given you before you started PA school?

"Trust the process." Even though this has been told to my classmates and me several times by our faculty, I never truly took it to heart until recently. There is a method to this madness, after all!

What is the last movie you watched?

I recently saw the new movie "The Lost City", starring Sandra Bullock and Channing Tatum. This was one of the first movies I saw in the theater since the start of the pandemic two years ago.

What is your favorite video game or favorite board game?

I love the Game of Life! I played it frequently with the pediatric patients at the Children's Hospital that I volunteered at during undergrad. Their reaction to having to pay taxes in the game was priceless!

 New Additions to the Archives

Michelle N. Schabowski, MSIS, CA

The PA History Society has received several great additions to the archives this year.

For all the golf enthusiasts, we received an unique promotional item: an AAPA golf ball! Always keep your national membership organization on your mind when you are on the greens.

We also received historic organizational documents, newsletters, and photographs of meetings from the Association of PAs in Obstetrics and Gynecology (APOP), which is celebrating its 30-year anniversary this year. Please stay tuned as we process the collection and upload the digital card catalog entry to our website.

The Society has added several children's books written by PAs to our collection. These books introduce children to a variety of health topics and explain what a PA does as their healthcare provider.

Another fun donation to our museum section is a New York license plate with a RPA designation standing for Registered PA. Truly a fun, historical item!

You can always check out our new collections which are featured on our website at any time!

Deciding on a Logo

*Reginald D. Carter, PhD, PA
 PAHx Historian Emeritus*

In 2001, a decision was made to create and staff an Office for the Preservation of Physician Assistant (PA) History at Duke University to provide a foundation to develop a national strategy to preserve, study and present the history of the PA profession. To secure funding and grow membership, the Office needed to create a website and a “catchy” logo. With a small grant from the American Academy of Physician Assistants (AAPA), the Educational Media Services at the Duke University Medical Center was hired to design a website and logo for the Office. The logo would be used on the website and on stationary, displays and promotional materials. A graphic design artist was assigned to develop a logo that contained the acronym PAHx for Physician Assistant History, using the medical abbreviation Hx for history.

Here are a few of the logo designs* that were considered:

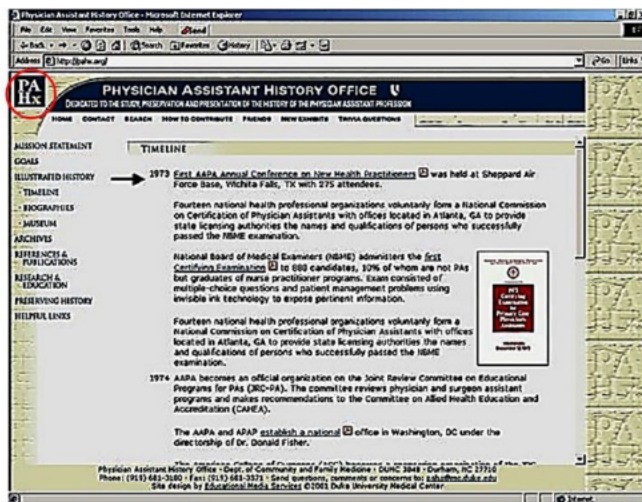

The final design was chosen using blue and gold colors to stand for truth and happiness (Cub Scouts). When vocalized, the PAHx acronym sounds like the Latin word pax meaning peace.

The website was launched one week prior to the meeting of a planning group for the Society held at the AAPA annual meeting in Anaheim, CA. The logo appeared in the left upper hand corner and is still used today as the logo for the PA History Society that was incorporated in 2002 and is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year.

* The original artwork is maintained in the PAHx Society's archives, Johns Creek, GA.

Carol James, a Long-term PA Colleague of Dr. Ben Carson

Joshua Penninger, MSM, PA-S

Most people are familiar with Dr. Benjamin Carson, the famous neurosurgeon responsible for many medical accomplishments, including separating conjoined twins and intrauterine neurosurgery, who later had a stint in the realm of politics. However, a little-known fact is that a PA named Carol James worked alongside him for 31 years. According to the Johns Hopkins Medicine's newsletter, NeuroLogic, James began working as a medical secretary in 1967 and later decided to attend PA school at Yale University. After graduating, she returned to Johns Hopkins to work in neurosurgery where she met Dr. Carson, the chief resident at the time, and they worked together until 2013. James later mentioned in the newsletter that, "It's been 31 years of collaboration, growing, learning and doing."¹ The pair ultimately retired together in 2013 and have remained close to one another as James is the godmother to Carson's three children - a testament to their longstanding friendship.

Ben Carson and his wife, Candy, shared many positive things about Carol James in their books, Think Big: Unleashing Your Potential for Excellence and A Doctor in the House: My Life with Ben Carson. Dr. Carson writes, "With the exception of my wife and mother, Carol James knows me better than anybody else in the world."

Dr. Carson mentions that “she [Carol] spends time with each patient. There is no way that I can spend the same amount of time with everyone, explaining the complex operations, all the ramifications and contingencies, yet Carol will take endless hours sitting down with families, explaining the pros and cons, reassuring them, and answering all their medical questions. She has an intuitive sense of just how to handle each person. Sometimes she draws diagrams, or will bring in dolls to explain, or show them an actual shunt.”² As Carson described, Carol James was extraordinary at providing compassionate, patient-centered care - qualities that embody the PA profession.
